MR. CARTER AND THE UNEMPLOYMENT PROBLEM

Next month Mr. Jimmie Carter will take over as the nation's leader. One problem that will face him is the unemployment problem. And one of the more serious aspects of the nation's unemployment situation is the almost total lack of employment opportunities for young people and minorities.

The negative point of teenage unemployment is its close association to juvenile delinquency. It stands to reason that teenage crime will be reduced if teens can own autos, TVs, etc. Those who are unable to afford such items may turn to crime. This is particularly true when one has been disassociated from the main stream of society by an inability to obtain employment.

The longer this situation exists, and it has existed too long already, the higher the risk of seriously damaging the values and aspirations of the nation's youth. We could by the neglect of this problem be creating a class of Americans with little or no desire to be productive members of society in the traditional sense of the term by denying them the opportunity to pursue the employment experience which stands as one of the ethical foundations of our nation. Not to mention the many thousand already lost to reform schools, juvenile detention centers, courts and jails who may have avoided those problems had society provided them with a productive outlet for their youthful energies.

President elect Carter must find a way to reduce unemployment. He promised and pledged a solution and this greatly contributed to his being elected President. So he must keep his promises. RIGHT ON!

Did you Know That?

The EEOC will find a Title VII violation where discrimination is found in the opportunity for training, promotion, transfer, etc. Thus, the EEOC considered it an unlawful employment practice where supervisory training was offered to male but not to female employees. Similarly, a Title VII violation was found where an employer provided an informal, inadequate training program to discourage blacks from bidding upon and receiving assistance in traditionally all-white job classifications. When a black employee who had worked for the company for 16 years did bid on such a job, he was given neither adequate supervision not did he enjoy the "close and harmonious relationship with an experienced" employee necessary to learn the job. The company's subsequent refusal to promote him on the grounds that he had not learned the job was found to be discriminatory because of the inadequate training period designed to maintain the status quo.

He was three times voted the Las Vegas Entertainer of the Year. In 1973 UNCF's Wilberforce University awarded him an honorary doctorate.

Proceeds from the $100 per person dinner party will be used to further the education of students at UNCF colleges. The UNCF supports 41 predominantly Black colleges throughout the country. Over one-third of these youngsters come from families which earn $6,000 or less.

An Able Leader For The NAACP

GUEST EDITORIAL: San Francisco Sun Reporter

The NAACP executive board has made a wise and judicious choice in unanimously selecting Rev. Benjamin L. Hooks to succeed Roy Wilkins at the helm of the nation's oldest and largest civil rights organization.

Rev. Hooks brings to the job a wealth of varied experience and a lifetime of dedication to the NAACP and its goals. He will need all of the talent he can muster to lead the organization through the difficulties it currently faces and through the trials that most certainly lie before it in the future.

He takes command at a time when the NAACP is fighting for its very survival, in the wake of a crippling court decision in Mississippi that threatens imminent financial ruin unless a huge amount of money can be raised quickly and a successful legal appeal can be carried out. As if that were not enough, Rev. Hooks inherits responsibility for an organization that is passing through a period of widespread doubt as to its effectiveness and credibility. Criticism has been heaped upon the NAACP in recent years from many people who have begun to feel it isn't doing enough to solve the problems facing Black Americans today.

Worse yet, Rev. Hooks takes over at a period of history that will likely be remembered for years to come at a time America's leadership backed off from its responsibilities to end racism and to solve the problems brought about by poverty and racial discrimination. It is a period when Americans have allowed their leaders to look the other way and complain about the high price of achieving economic and social justice as crime and unemployment soared and the rich got richer still at the expense of the poor and the disenfranchised.

Rev. Hooks can't solve these problems alone. But he can accomplish a great deal in leading the NAACP into the mainstream of the struggle against social injustice and in ensuring that it is the kind of organization which government, business, and the American people will have to reckon with every time a decision is made that affects the welfare of the nation's 25 million Black citizens. Hooks brings experience in such fields as banking, the law, the clergy, and communications into his job. These will serve him well as he begins the monumental task of filling the shoes of Roy Wilkins, who accomplished such a great deal during his 20-year tenure in the job.

One final note: Ben Hooks has served his country well as the first Black FCC commissioner, a job he will have to relinquish when he takes over the NAACP in January. We would hope that the President of the United States fills the vacancy on the FCC with a Black American as highly qualified and capable as Benjamin Hooks.

Questions

GUEST EDITORIAL: By Benjamin Hooks

Almost everywhere I have gone in the past few months, folks have come up to me with questions: "What is this I hear about your leaving the Federal Communications Commission? Are you going to be the next NAACP executive director? You're not leaving the Commission are you? I hear you are going to be the next Chairman of the Commission. Is this true?"

Questions. Questions. Questions. Questions I wanted so much to answer in a positive way, but could not. I could not for the simple reason that I had no positive answers at my disposal.

It was, indeed, true as some folks were saying that if Jimmy Carter won the election that, as ranking Democrat on the Commission, I would certainly be in line to be appointed chairman.

But all this was so much speculation. "If Jimmy Carter is elected?" "If he should choose" me as a ranking Democrat at the FCC to become its chairman. If. If. If. The if's were contacted and asked by board members "If the board should choose you would you accept?"

Well, what does that mean? It was an iffy question once more, and I could not give an honest answer to the many queries based on that. Throughout these many months, I have never once felt I "had the NAACP job sewed up."

Indeed, I often felt just the opposite. The Search and Screening Committee of the National Board of Directors of the NAACP was indeed masterful in keeping a blank face in terms of its considered choice.

And so, you see, I had nothing at my disposal, no concrete information of any value with which to answer the many queries. Hence, I might have appeared to be "stonewalling" when in fact, I simply could not answer any of the questions with truth or accuracy.

Suprised

Never in my wildest dreams did I dream this would occur. I have always loved the NAACP, felt if I worked hard and lived long enough someday I might become a national board member. Nothing more. I am still flabbergasted.

Nonetheless, I will do my level best to follow in the footsteps of the giants who went before me: John R. Shillady, James Weldon Johnson, Walter White and now, Mr. Wilkins.

The task before me is an awesome one. I have no illusions about that. The NAACP under the brilliant and inspiring leadership of Wilkins and his predecessors has been in the forefront of the struggle for civil rights in this country for more than 67 years.

Mr. Wilkins retires in July, 1977. I will then assume the NAACP leadership mantle. I have no great plans to alter the present course of this organization. I only hope to expand and make bigger and, hopefully, better those things the NAACP has always done with so much commitment and excellence.

But I can only do that with the help of American citizens —Black and white, brown and yellow, rich and poor, Jew and gentile —and, of course, with God's help.

I look upon the assumption of this new post as not a negation of my work on the Commission, but as an opportunity to expand that work in many many more areas in American life. The fight continues at another level. (NNPA)

A POEM FOR MOMS
(Or Black Madonna)

This poem is dedicated to Mrs. E.V. Jones..... my mamma.

Eyes of sprinkled, tinkled stars and hair like cotton -- velvetized,
in which a gray vein of widsom streaks.

You are all the rainbows of blackness blended into one!

Your skin has been weathered by hard times, your temper is still the same, like razor blades (short and sharp)!
Though an aura of kindness has always surrounded your face, no matter what the situation.

Smother me, thoroughly, with all your live,
mother me, for I am your long lost cub.
Your discipline has enlightened me,
I surrender, grasping all your understanding and teachings, for I no longer will hide myself from your relentless preachings,

of religion and family,
of life and my responsibilities.

Ya know, I feel home, in just the thought of you.
bless you Mom, for thou art truthfully,
beauty and blackness,
personified!
